Art Unit: 1644

1. Claims 17-19 are pending.
2. In view of applicant's response received 6-23-04 the previous rejection has been obviated.
3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 17-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Brevario et al., in view of US Patent 6,344,320, both newly cited.

Brevario et al., teaches the PTX 3 protein having SEQ ID NO.1. (Figure 1 in particular). Brevario et al., also teaches there is considerable interest in the identification of genes that are expressed in inflammatory endothelium and can be used as markers for vascular involvement in the disease. Brevario et al., further teaches that PTX3 has characteristics that make it attractive as a potential marker for inflammatory conditions. Brevario et al., does not teach PTX3 in a pharmaceutical composition.

However, the '320 patent teaches the making of nascent proteins in a cell free assay system and further teaches putting said newly made proteins in pharmaceutical compositions with pharmaceutical acceptable carriers for multiple potential uses such as diagnostic kits to screen humans or other animals for the presence of certain diseases or disorders or for immunological active compositions (column 23-24 in particular).

Therefore one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made would have been motivated to use the amino acid sequence of PTX3 taught by Brevario et al., and make a pharmaceutical composition in a cell free assay system taught by the '320 patent because Brevario et al., teaches there is considerable interest in the identification of genes that are expressed in inflammatory endothelium and can be used as markers for vascular involvement in disease, identifies one via cDNA screening and teaches that it is attractive as a potential marker for inflammatory conditions and the '320 patent allows for the translation of the newly identified protein in a pharmaceutical compositions for testing of the proteins biological properties and usefulness in a diagnostic kit or any treatment method.
